Today was a day to honor our father's and our husbands. If I could have visited my father today, I would have given him the biggest hug, tell him how lucky I am to be his daughter and give him something yummy to eat! Instead a phone call had to do and even then that just doesn't seem to do it justice.

Brady's Father's Day could have been better but I hope he knows how much he is loved and appreciated- especially over the last 3 weeks. Hailey made a treasure map for him to follow for his gifts and then he spent the day working and mowing the lawn. Hailey and Hunter enjoyed that part. Riding on the lawn mower is a big highlight for them! We spent some time in the evening together which was nice. Hopefully next year will be a more relaxing day or better yet tomorrow. His main project is complete. Hip-Hip-Hooray!!!

Wish we could have spent the day with Smokey too at the lake house. We will have to all get together in the next week and really celebrate. My father in law is a very happy, gracious, hardworking man who tells jokes that I mostly get now that I am older!

So Happy Father's Day to all. We love you!!!
