Tonight while I was making dinner, Hunter opened up one the storage cabinets underneath the stove. It happenes to be right across from the refrigerator. He has this thing where he likes to take items out of the refrigerator when it is open. Usually it is the parmesean cheese container. A few days ago, he discovered the package of stick butter I use for cooking. I didn't notice it got put into the cabinet. If he had not opened it up, it would have been for a long time since I don't open that one up very often! Does butter stink after awhile?

