Today Hailey had her first ever school project due. They have these family projects that are due once a month and count towards part of her grade. The assignment was to create a star and involve the whole family. Hailey wanted to make the entire star out of metal but we opted for a wooden one. It's easier to cut :). We went to Lowes this week and picked up some supplies and got to work the next evening. Hailey really liked helping her daddy learn to use the tools and work on the project. She did a great job decorating it and we think it turned out pretty cute!
