Hailey loves Ferris Wheels. She has been on the one at Frontier City a few times with Brady. I haven't been on one in a very long time. I wanted to go with them and experience it as a family. I thought it would be fun. It wasn't. I did not enjoy it one bit and the thought of them dropping off the edge scared me even more. No seatbealts. Just freely enjoying the scenery. I don't care for them to go again either but they most likely will!

After the Ferris Wheel, we headed off to use up the remaining tickets. Hailey and Brady went in the moving fun house and then I joined Hailey. Then we headed off for a pitstop at the restrooms and then began the long journey back to the car. Brady wound up carrying Hailey most of the way. We even got the pleasure of almost running over the "Snoop Doggy Look-Alike" parking attendant who wasn't watching as he was driving his golf cart. Hunter and Brady did enjoy the yummy corn dog and lemonade while I enjoyed my delicious cherry lemonade. I would love to take Hailey to a small fair some day so she can experience what I did as a child. I remember going with my mother and grandmother many times. I loved looking at the displays, seeing the awards, eating good country food and walking hand in hand with them. The State Fair has here has become so busy that you almost can't enjoy yourself and there are too many teenagers parading themselves around.
