Yesterday Hunter kept saying "Fry Fries. Fry Fries." Hailey even noticed she thought he was asking for them. I had forgotten that I had purchased a bag of them about 3 weeks ago. The package caught my eye when browsing the frozen food section. I normally don't buy them and I remembered I had them this morning. So after Hunter asked for them again this moring, I baked up a tray. He has been eating small amounts since he got this fever thing. He enjoyed his fry fries for breakfast and lunch! I think this is his first official request of asking for something to eat. He usually sees food and then asks for it. This time he came up with his own idea!

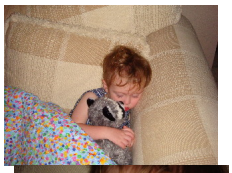

Hunter loves this stuffed raccoon. It is Hailey's and he has adopted it. Here is another shot of him sleeping off this sickness. He also woke up today with a rash on his tummy and back. The nurse at the doctor's office said it is not uncommon for a rash to develop after a viral infection. Haven't seen it with Hailey ever. Always somthing new to experince. Love you little buddy!
