On Friday, we drove to Scottsdale to visit Nana's grave. Hailey put the flower we bought at Ikea on the marble slab. She had some pretty fall colored flowers in her vase and the one we bought matched! We sat for awhile, collected treasures and took a few pictures. My mother's grave is by this beautiful tree in the cemetery. My grandmother and father Brewer is also by this tree as well as my aunt Judy. As we were leaving, I noticed a faint rainbow in the distance. It made me smile. My brother Ryan and I talked about that incredibly sad song called I'll Build You a Rainbow that the church put out in the 70's. I often think of that song and sing it in my head whenever I see a rainbow. We took family pictures on Wednesday afternoon. There were storms in the surrounding area and it had already rained at our location. When we were finished and leaving, a big beautiful rainbow was up in the sky. Ryan said that was from Nana and I agree...
