RED WAGONS

Hunter got a new red wagon from Grammy & Smokey. He loves to pull and push things like most children do. It has been up and down the hallway several times and loaded up with toys already. I am excited to be able to take it outside next week for some outdoor adventures. A wagon seems like a childhood staple. I am sure we had one growing up but I don't recall one at the moment. Santa brought Hailey one when she was two years old but we keep it at the lake house. Can't wait to see what treasures it will hold this spring and summer!

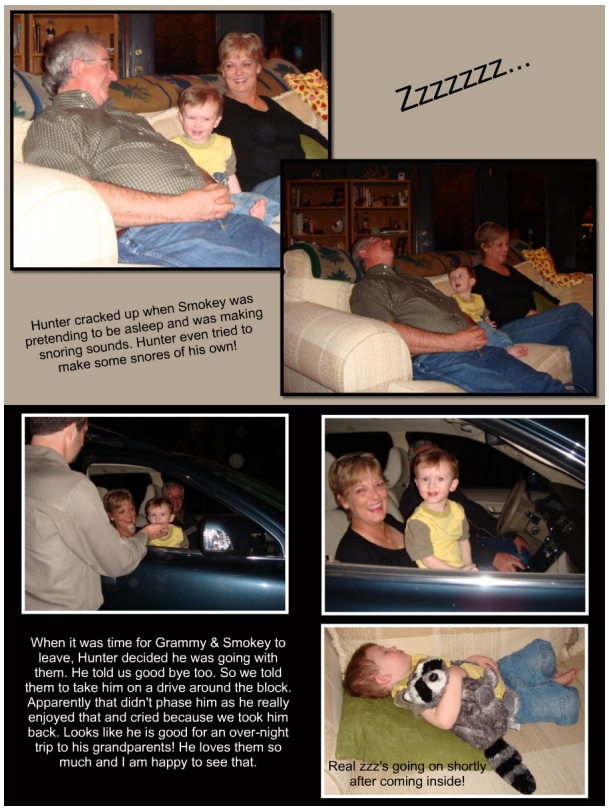

Brady found this Lionel train bank online recently for Hunter. It lights up and makes noise when coins are added. It is pretty cute. I wonder how long it will take to fill it up when he gets older. For now, those coins are getting a workout from being dropped in and taken out!

HUNTER'S TRAIN BANK!

His Thomas Cake

Hailey was such a great big sister on his birthday. She helped me with him the entire day from putting on his clothes, to changing his diaper and playing with him. They are forming a nice relationship lately and I love it. Hailey also helped me decorate while Hunter played with his giant Thomas balloon. She liked throwing the Thomas confetti all over the table the most!

Zzzzzzz...
Hunter cracked up when Smokey was pretending to be asleep and was making snoring sounds. Hunter even tried to make some snores of his own!
When it was time for Grammy & Smokey to leave, Hunter decided he was going with them. He told us good bye too. So we told them to take him on a drive around the block. Apparently that didn't phase him as he really enjoyed that and cried because we took him back. Looks like he is good for an over-night trip to his grandparents! He loves them so much and I am happy to see that.
Real zzz's going on shortly after coming inside!
