I love days when I wake up and see snow falling. It makes a very pretty white carpet and covers up all the brown grass and bare trees. I find myself staring out the windows for long periods of time too. A day like this makes me want to find things to do inside, drink many cups of hot chocolate and not leave the house. I am not fond of driving in snowy weather. I can do it but I prefer not to do so. Something about potentially sliding into something is not exciting to me! On the other hand, I do enjoy going out briefly for a sled ride or to build a snowman but once my ears start to hurt from the bitter cold, it is inside for me!
