I have read books to Hailey at bedtime since she was very young. Over the past year, the night time book has now been replaced with stories. I make them up in my head. She always remembers to tell me "Tell me a story in your head". The last two months or so I told her a story about some jelly beans. Now when it is time for her story she will say "Tell me a jelly bean story!" The stories are always about jelly beans and their adventures. I never know what I am going to say until I lay down with her and begin. I have come up with some pretty funny and creative ones to very boring and dull ones. She usually requests two stories. Then it is off to bed! I love that she likes to hear them. It is our special tradition together.
