My garden plants are finally growing! After a late start planting, I see some large and tiny vegetables growing. It has been fun watching the lima bean plants develop as I have never planted those before in my garden. I can even see baby cucumbers - yum! I thinned out the popcorn this morning. I over seeded and they are way too close so I hope they live anyway. Yesterday, we also picked our first crop of raspberries. Hunter enjoyed them just like the strawberries. I am so happy he loves fruits. I purchased some cherries yesterday and he loved those as well. Hopefully in a few weeks, I will have pictures to show of my cucumbers and squash!

Popcorn! This was before I thinned them out!
