

Brady likes Snickerdoodle cookies if he is going to eat them. So I made him a batch for Father's Day on Saturday. I also got to test out my new Bosch machine. The cookies turned out yummy if I do say so myself! We wound up leaving for the lake and in my gathering of items I accidentally left the second half of the batter on the counter. Bummer - but another great excuse to make more cookies!

We stopped off at Dairy Queen in Texas to eat before we made it to the Tackle Box. We needed to leave so I just let them eat their treats in the car and was expecting the consequences. I had to take a picture of the kids. Hailey is notorious for making a mess when she eats. Shockingly the entire ice-cream sandwich made it into her mouth. She only left a small trace of chocolate on her cheek. She absolutely loves ice-cream sandwiches! Hunter did pretty well himself and only ate about a third of his Dilly Bar.
