Me to Hailey: "Hailey why is there string across your doorway?"

Hailey's response: "It means no boys allowed."

She has closed the door, put the cradle in front of the door, mentioned no boys allowed to Hunter in the past month or so but today she decided to just put up string. Personally I think she should just say NO ONE ALLOWED due to how messy it is!!! She loves to play by me but I seriously can't handle toys in the living room anymore. We often go through her toys and donate them but they have multiplied again. I need my sister to come and de-clutter her stuff. I can only think of a few items Hailey does not play with often. The kitchen and baby stuff are still hot items and boy do they multiply when out. You have to have this item and then this item. She has a great time playing which I love but until we donate again, new stuff is off limits. I often look at how much has been collected between the two and think that it looks like a toy store threw up in the house!

* I am partly to blame as I love finding girly discounted stuff! Like the new dress up rack I found at Sportsmans Warehouse. Pictures coming soon. I am going to spray paint it tomorrow!
