The journal entry below is an ongoing list and will be updated for YEARS if it works out! I have kept a journal since I was about 8 years old and the entries are sometimes more detailed- usually about a specific event. I decided to just list out the things I can remember from my past and present and put them down randomly for my children to read about someday. This is so they might get a better feel on what happened in my life. I am a very simple, ordinary person but looking at all these things you can see how they all come together and make up who you are today. I would like to think that they one day will make me as I strive to be a better human being to my husband, children and those around me.

Extraordinary
