Sportsman's Warehouse went out of business here a few months ago and I got this wooden thingy for Hailey. I thought it would be perfect to hang dress up clothes on, purses, etc. It was my 3 dollar purchase. I thought I could just spray paint it and be on my way. Well then I was reminded of my horrible spray painting ability. I tend to over spray and somehow I manage to get drips and make something so pretty look dreadful. I usually have Brady spray paint stuff for me. I picked out a light yellow color for it because her room walls are pink and a touch of yellow would be welcome. So after I realized the spray paint wasn't going to work, I went back for some cheap paint. The only yellow they had was a bright yellow canary color. It could stand to have another round of paint on it but it was a little loud for me already. We jeweled it up a bit and are searching for the perfect topper for it. I would have loved this when I was young. Girls like to put their stuff places!
