On the opposite side of Pinwheel was Steamboat. I would love to witness this one erupting in person. When it erupts, it can rocket 90-120 meters in the air of scalding water and is supposed to be two to three times the average height of Old Faithful. It was blowing steam and gurgling a little when we visited. Jennifer and I were hoping that we could make this one go off too. This area had more pine trees and was a beautiful walk.

