We continued our drive through the pretty land, when the noise level from Hailey and Hunter was annoying both Brady and I. Their car seats were next to each other. Hailey had enough of Hunter bugging her every other minute. They were both becoming restless and had eaten snack after snack. We arrived in this area called Swan Valley. There were so many grand log cabin homes among all this farm land nestled by a river. Brady pulled off the road into a farm road. It was just wide enough for one car and no room to turn around so we followed it up to the very top. Brady got out to take a peek at the view from on top of a hay bale while the kids got an earful from their mother. We tried to tell them we were going to leave them there jokingly but that didn't phase Hailey. She knows better of us. This was their first official car pullover! Hailey did get out and enjoyed the view with her daddy while I tended to Hunter, the backseat mess and those car seats.

[video:http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MpNZAaxxkhQ 500x500]

[video:http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=l9l_ZtYJMFk 500x500]