Hailey had Monday and Tuesday of this week off from school so we went and did a few of the things she wanted to do on those days. First stop was Mitch Park. She hasn't had too many opportunities to ride her bike long distances and be free. This park has the perfect riding space for children. We did the whole course. She only wound up walking her bike 3-4 times near the back where it gets hilly. I was very proud of her and she did great. We stopped halfway for a drink and a snack. That is also where her little brother decided he needed to use the restroom and just did it by the side of the pathway before I had any say so in the matter. Glad no one was coming! We also saw a cute little bunny as we headed back out.

BEFORE... (Notice her bent left arm. Her being double jointed grosses me out sometimes!)
