Today was a lovely, cool day to open up the first day of Fall (better known as Autumn)! It is my favorite time of the year. I opened up the windows to let in the coolness right after I woke up. I was reminded of what I found last week when I opened up the windows for the first time all summer. Seems like a few June bugs have perished! I am excited about more days like this when I can enjoy the cool breeze and keep the AC off. I don't enjoy cold weather though - the kind where your bones get frozen. I could skip over winter except for the fact winter clothes are fun to wear, snow is pretty and I love sitting in front of a blazing fire in my house being super lazy. So welcome Autumn. I am ready for you!

Enjoy my lovely June Bug pics! Want to clean this up?

