I haven't blogged much lately because not much has happened. Haven't been anywhere exciting and no one has visited. Same ole stuff around here lately. The weather has turned cooler and it has been rainy/drizzly for a long time now. I don't mind that at all as I love this weather - except I would like it to dry out some so I can use the blower and try to clean up the 8 thousand acorns that have dropped. So far the leaves are not that annoying yet. I think they look pretty when they blanket the yard for awhile. The acorns just make a mess though. The squirrels are doing their best but I have noticed quite a few dead ones on our street. The outside cat has taken care of a few lately too. She keeps leaving me squirrel and mole presents!

The children are doing well. Hailey is doing fine in school and brings home things almost daily. She has picked up on a lot in the past month. Next week she will start back in gymnastics at Oklahoma Gold. She is excited to get to go again. Hunter has been talking my ear off this week and complaining about everything. He is starting to not want to take his nap but I know he still needs one. He is packing on a little weight and his clothes are fitting better. He still is tall and lean but I have noticed he has grown!

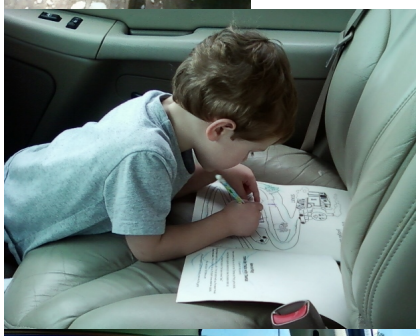

I haven't done much besides taking care of the kiddos and regular mommy duties. Brady did order me some new toner for my printer. Thanks! Now I can print out a nice copy of the directories I need to get started on for church! I have also been working on continuing to weed out all the unnecessary junk we own. We cleared out a small section in the garage. Hooray! I have also been enjoying my time with Hunter for about 30 minutes in the parent pickup line at Hailey's school. We chat about everything, he plays around and I read articles on my phone. I am grateful for technology!

Hailey has off from school today and tomorrow for Fall Break. The upcoming weeks hopefully will be blog worthy.

Until then - enjoy my dead animal pics!
