

Thanksgiving in Santa Fe, New Mexico

Written by Camey

Sunday, 06 December 2009 16:15 - Last Updated Sunday, 06 December 2009 06:09

---

We drove to Santa Fe, New Mexico to spend Thanksgiving with Brady's family. They rented a house there for fun. It was a beautiful house in a nice spot. Our children loved climbing the hill across the street and playing with family the most. We took many walks, visited the square, went sight-seeing, ate a delicious Thanksgiving dinner, played in the snow and drove to Bandelier National Park to see some caves. This was a major highlight for Hailey. She loves exploring.

I took some photos. Brady took a lot of photos and I am sure Kelsey and Michael took many as well. I am going to spare everyone the mass picture posts this go around. Hope everyone had a wonderful Thanksgiving with your friends and family.

On Thanksgiving morning, Kelsey speared up some drawing with Hailey. Everyone joined in on the action at some point - even Penquino sitting on the table. She is the newest $3 stuffed animal compliments of Ross.

Placemat Hailey made at school for Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving in Santa Fe, New Mexico

Written by Camey

Sunday, 06 December 2009 16:15 - Last Updated Sunday, 06 December 2009 06:09

---

From the Middle Ages, the turkey was a common sight in the kitchen. It was a common sight in the kitchen. It was a common sight in the kitchen.

I liked looking at this guy!

Thanksgiving in Santa Fe, New Mexico

Written by Camey

Sunday, 06 December 2009 16:15 - Last Updated Sunday, 06 December 2009 06:09

---

