This month Hailey saw the Macy's commercial where the little girl comes in to mail her letter to Santa and is lifted up to mail her letter. She loves this commercial and of course wanted to do the very same thing. Last Saturday, we went to the mall so Brady could see his eye doctor for new glasses and I had to pick up something at James Avery. I brought along her letter to Santa. There was actually two letters. One was her wish list and the other was a picture for him. When Brady told her there was a Macy's, she immediately asked about her letters and was super happy when I told her I had them. The mailbox had two slots at different heights which was fun. There was even a desk nearby to write a letter right then and there if you wanted too. Here is a quick picture we snapped of her fun moment!

Here is what her letter to Santa said and the translation for me. She is working on sounding out words and writing them if she doesn't know how to spell them. They are all run together but if you separate them out, you can tell what she was trying to spell. Love it!!!

She did leave off an item off her list because she told Santa that one in person. She wants a blow up pool. (A super large one where you can climb the stairs and slide down. You know the kind that are like 600+ dollars!!!).
