

The ice has stopped and snow is falling at a steady rate. I saw that the birds were searching for food so I went out and sprinkled some bird seed on the ground and filled one feeder. They were so happy. I already need to go sprinkle more out as the snow fall has covered it all up. The wild cats are happy too. They are hoping to get yet another snack! The cardinals are especially beautiful to see in the snow covered white trees.

