This morning the snow that had fallen all day yesterday looked absolutely beautiful covering the many trees in our backyard. It was a sea of white and an overnight transformation! The birds are still happy with their pot of birdseed gold. I think I have stared out the window all morning!

