This morning Brady wanted to take the children out to make a giant snowman in all the untouched snow in the front yard. They got all bundled up and went outside to find out that the snow was just too powdery and not "roll-able"! Hailey immediately plopped herself smack in the snow in the 5 seconds it took her to go from the front door to the yard. We made do and enjoyed ourselves anyway. Hailey decided to make a snowball fort for all her snowballs. It turned into a snowball castle when Brady added a few icicle touches from the front porch. Hunter played more today and he likes being hit with snow (in the back of course). He giggles. We need Mr. Sun to come out and melt the powdery stuff just a wee bit so we can make that snowman!

Here is Hunter facing backwards as Brady throws snow at him!
