Hailey brought home a tea set that was in the toy bin at Brady's office. She wanted to fill it up with water and play but I wouldn't let her do it at his office. Today we had yet another snow day so we had a tea party in the Atrium. It was a welcome change even for just a bit. I voted for this area as I had just mopped the floor and I told her that pink lemonade would be much better for a tea party. We made some sugar cookies together and I surprised her with the pink icing and sprinkles. She loves that stuff. Hunter woke up from his nap and asked me if the cookies were for Santa because he saw me icing them. I rarely ice the cookies we make! Hailey put the picnic blanket down that my mother-in-law made for me and set up the area. That blanket gets used several times a week. We practiced using our manners and sipping from our tea cups with our pinkie finger in the air. Hopefully tomorrow Mr. Sunshine will come out and we can go window shopping or something else!

[video:http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wJTRwKgMWdY 500x500]