We have officially gotten the yucky bug! It started last Monday when I woke up in the middle of the night getting sick. I usually never get so sick it takes me down. This time it did and Brady had to stay home from work to take care of the children. I get the usual stuff now and then but this time it wasn't pleasant. Hunter woke up at 5 am Saturday morning and proceeded to get sick. This is his first time to be sick. He has had runny noses and a slight fever once but this time it was different. He threw up countless times - even at the doctor's office. Brady even got to help out by saving the carpet when Hunter decided to throw up on him. Luckily it all landed on his pants and not the carpet. Sorry Brady! He ate 2 saltines, half of a graham cracker and about a half cup to a cup of pedialyte yesterday. This was really late in the evening though. All day he either slept or pushed and threw his cup down. He would even shake his head back and forth. It was kind of cute though. We spent the day snuggling just about.

This morning he was so thirsty and so far 4 ounces of liquid and a few cheerios have stayed down. He is running a fever but hopefully it will pass soon. The doctor we saw said the stomach bug is going around really bad right now and that medication won't help. So... GET OUT OF OUR HOUSE YOU NASTY BUG and DON'T GO TO HAILEY!!!
