Monday was Princess and Pirate dress up day at school. Hailey dressed up as Snow White. We happened to have her aunt Kelsey's costume hanging up in the dress up closet. It was a perfect fit and the perfect opportunity to wear it. I think she looked so stinkin' cute but I am just the mom and all moms say that about their own! She told me they had a really good time at school. The librarian read a themed book and they did fun activities in her class. She came home with a paper crown, a pirate mask, a necklace from her friend, gold chocolate coins (which Hunter wanted really really bad), tattoos, bracelets, etc. She did tell me that they were even offering to paint nails. She skipped over this one. I asked her why. She said she wasn't sure if I would have liked her to do that or not. So sweet she at least thought about it first but then again I hope she doesn't take it the other way. She had a great day. The last week of school is fun!

* Hunter did get one of those chocolate coins the next morning right when he woke up. He was so happy and came up to me telling me how nice it was of Hailey. He begged several times Monday afternoon and even cried to me about it but he wound up being a pickle on and off to her so she denied him. Oh was he ever so sad.
