I am out of everything in my kitchen just about- even things I don't use very much. I wish I had a secret store in my home sometimes. You know...when you go to the cabinet and reach for that item your hand magically reaches to the grocery store shelf and wa-la you have the item you needed! I also wish I had a ridiculous amount of the items I like and a place to stash it all. I would absolutley love a walk-in pantry someday. I would be in grocery/organization heaven. A small money tree or magical wand that really worked would be nice too! My mother had a similar desire but hers was office supplies. She had way too many red pens and tape! I was helping her once make a list for the store and she had me put tape on the list. I told her she already had bunches of tape and she said "You never know. I just don't want to run out!". So my goal for the next couple of months is to build my Secret Store and my pantry back up!
