Rhonda enjoys to knit and does it very well I might add. When she was here visiting, Hailey would sit on the couch by her and watch what she was doing. Hailey likes this kind of stuff and since I am no help, she gravitates to anyone with more skills than I. She and I have a list of things we want to learn to do well someday. So as a movie was playing, Rhonda quickly made this sweet little bassinet that uses a plastic container as its base. She had previously made a cute blanket for the tiny baby with ducks on it. Hailey seemed to watch her every move. I wonder what she was thinking as she saw her make it and then pull out the baby and tiny toy animals. When she was finished she quietly gave it to her. Hailey's eyes lit up and she seemed speech less. She glanced over at me with a big smile. She told Rhonda thanks and came over to show me. She took it to church the next day and has carried it around since then talking to it and playing with the tiny animals. She is in this liking tiny things stage. Here is the cute baby bassinet that doubles as a purse!
