

Christmas Tree Choppage 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

Our yearly tradition in search of the perfect tree... We are not "GREEN" in our family. We love a fresh tree and supporting our local folks by buying a ridiculously expensive fresh tree :) Plus it is dang fun to watch it sizzle when we finally burn it in the summer.

This way!!!

Christmas Tree Chopping 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

Taking a shortcut to another field...

Hunter finds a large stick and teases me with it!

When he got to this year we had a tag on it so he visited this particular tree was tucked

Christmas Tree Chopping 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

Timber!

Counting the cones. Hunter's was 12 years young. A good number in our book.

Hunter finally gets a ride. We did a lot of walking and it was cold.

Hailey with her pine cone stash!

Christmas Tree Chopping 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

Seriously, I consumed a cup of cider.

The kids favorite part is cutting the plastic wrap off the tree. They wanted to be bundled

Wow. The amount of plastic wrap that was used to wrap the tree is getting tangled in plastic

Everyone will be glad stringing up the lights. So happy good luck. We didn't think this one

Christmas Tree Chopping 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

Always gives to us in our honeymoon by the manager of the

At home, my wife and I had a great time. The fish tank was a gift from the manager of the

My taken fresh wreath!

The fresh scent of pine!

Christmas Tree Choppage 2010

Written by Camey

Monday, 10 January 2011 12:08 - Last Updated Monday, 10 January 2011 01:41

The perfect tree for the topper!

The star I chose for our first Christmas together.

Putting the balls into the tree that I grew up with as a child. My mother made it.

The fun large plastic ornaments I got on clearance last year.

