It started snowing late Sunday night February 12, 2012. We woke up to a blanket of pretty white stuff Monday morning but only about 2 inches. Unfortunately Hailey had to go to school and didn't get to enjoy the full 2 inches. Sadness. We have had such a warm winter this year. It has been cold but nothing like we have had in the past. Such a bummer too. I enjoy parking myself in front of the fireplace at night and having school cancelled so we can be all lazy and play in the snow.

By the time Hailey was out of school, the sun came out and melted off most. I let them go out back and play in what was left. Not as much fun but they enjoyed taking advantage of the snow anyway.

* Hailey insisted that I take a picture of her and the snow on the way to school and I even got a snowball thrown at me as I walked out to the truck to drive her to school. She giggled. Hunter giggled too as he planted a good one on my back when they were playing out in the backyard. Hopefully we will get some more winter weather soon!

