Hailey has been anticipating the day she could remove her initial stud earrings she got when her ears were pierced six weeks ago. She has been so diligent cleaning her ears 3x a day. She knew just the pair of earrings she was going to put in first. Her uncle Michael had given her a jewelry set for Christmas a year ago. They were dolphins. Hailey loves dolphins. He always seems to spoil her with the perfect gifts. It was fun to watch her take them out and put in a new pair. She has a couple other pairs of earrings from her uncle Michael - specifically some butterfly ones from Tiffany's - but I won't let her wear those to school yet. It is going to be fun going earring shopping with her now to get matching mom/daughter earrings!

It was a family affair watching her take her studs out :)

