I love surprising my children on Valentine's Day in the morning when they wake. I have fond memories of Valentine's Day as a child. The homemade cards, treats and class fun. I also looked forward to the special card my dad would always give me. He made a point to find and give me a letter or card. I still have every one of them.

This morning the children woke to a few fun surprises. I hope they have a good day at school. Hunter woke at 6am telling me his ear was hurting. Darn ears. Will have to see what they can do for him now. Been through several rounds of meds :(

These are the treats I made for the kids classes this year. I signed up for pretzels for Hunter's class but that seemed kinda boring so we embellished them some! We also sent some plain. Hailey was thrilled with her pink chocolate pops. Can't wait to see all the cute Pinterest goodies the kids will receive. Cracks me up at how the old fashioned make your own cards have gone by the way side and now moms spend hours making all these cute things FOR their kids and they get destroyed in 2 seconds flat! All to out do the other moms. Silly.

Valentine class treats 2013

