I was already in the thick of morning sickness and had no energy to do much. I decided on this particular morning that I was going to muster up some energy to vacuum the carpet in the living room. As I was doing so, I heard my cell phone ring. It was the school. It scared the dickens out of me since I have never had a call in the 3 years Miss H has been in school. I was told she had an accident on the playground and that I probably should come up to the school. I quickly got myself dressed and headed to the school. When I got there she started to cry a wee bit. She hadn't until that point. She hadn't seen herself either and was very scared. I didn't let her look. I just held her and assured her it would be okay but I knew we needed to get her checked out at the Emergency Room.

* Brady was still home at the time so he and Hunter got dressed and met us at the hospital.

Back in the ER a couple days later after some concerns.
Get well Hailey!
