That is exactly what Hailey said to me as she was getting into the truck after school. Her tooth was ready to come out and bugging her so she pulled it out at school. She asked her homeroom teacher if she could and she said yes - in PE, which was the class they were headed to next. Funny. So in PE, she got a paper towel and pulled it out. I don't remember ever willingly pulling my teeth out. She's like her daddy. Then she went to the office and they gave her the sweetest treasure box to keep her tooth in for the Tooth Fairy. She carried that treasure box around in her pocket like she had a million dollars till bedtime. She decided to keep the box and just put the tooth in the pillow pocket. I love her happy expression in the picture I took.
