After school, I was washing Grayson up in the bathtub. The H's were in Hailey's room playing. I heard all sorts of ruckus. They like to roll and tackle each other lately. Drives me bonkers only because I know someone WILL get hurt. Then I see two little frantic kids in front of me in the bathroom. Hunter has blood all over his hands and is holding his mouth and they both have these really concerned looks. He tells me that Hailey knocked his tooth out with her knee. I calmed him down and told him it would be okay and told Hailey to go get him a paper towel. They went and looked for the missing tooth and washed up. I just had to involve Brady in the drama and called him on FaceTime. Come to find out they were wrestling over a pointer stick. Hailey's knee went into his face and knocked out his tooth. It was wiggly but it still was held on by the gums. Brady had tried pulling it again the day earlier. So apparently enough force was the trick :) They both hopefully learned a lesson. It wasn't exactly how Hunter envisioned his first front tooth coming out but he was happy it was out. His new smile makes me laugh.  Love the hole and his cute smile! He was a little concerned about telling his teacher. They graph lost teeth. I told him to just tell her he lost his tooth. He was afraid he would have to rat on himself that he was fighting with his sister!
