Last Friday, Brady took Hailey to Family Fun Night at school. Its the yearly fundraiser. Hunter was invited to attend a birthday party for his friend and wanted to go to that a little bit more. So I took Hunter and Grayson and Brady took Hailey. She said she had a really good time and I was thrilled to see her finally win at the cakewalk. She so desperately wanted to win last year. All that was left were the tiny cakes but she won! She still hasn't tried it. She didn't see that the label also said it had raspberry in it too. She's not so game to try new things. Maybe her love of white chocolate will prevail. Wish she would have won any of the baskets she put her tickets into but apparently the same some person won a lot of them. They must have purchased a ton of tickets. Brady and I agreed. If you want to donate money to the school. Fine. Don't look like a jerk and have your kid win all the baskets. Not cool. Love my kids school but I guess that's what you get when you have coffee cup momma's in their exercise clothes and designer handbags walking in and out of the school with their kiddos :)

